DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
 - I. Claims 50-56, drawn to methods for detecting whether a genomic DNA is hypomethylated or hypermethylated, classified in class 435, subclass 6.
 - II. Claims 60-63, 67-71 73-74, and 76, drawn to methods for identifying human TSP50 mRNA in a test sample, classified in class 536, subclass 24.31.

2. Inventions I and II are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case the different inventions are drawn to materially different method, which have different process steps and different objectives. The method of Invention I requires cleaving genomic DNA with a restriction enzyme, hybridizing a probe, and determining the size of the hybridization complex wherein said restriction enzyme cleaves nonmethylated DNA only in order to detect whether genomic DNA is hypomethylated or hypermethylated. The method of Invention II requires making a cDNA probe which is complementary to human TSP50 mRNA and using the probe to detect human TSP50 mRNA.

3. These inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a different status in the art as demonstrated by their different classification and recognized divergent subject matter. Further, inventions I-II require different searches that are not co-extensive. For instance, a literature search for the method of invention I is not co-extensive with a literature search for the method of invention II. For instance, a finding that, for example, the method of invention I is anticipated or obvious over the prior art would not necessarily extend to a finding that the method of invention II is also anticipated or obvious over the prior art. Similarly, a finding that the method of invention I is novel and unobvious over the prior art would not necessarily extend to a finding that the method of invention II is also novel and unobvious over the prior art. Accordingly, examination of these distinct inventions would pose a serious burden on the examiner and therefore restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

4. Applicant is advised that the response to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed.
